Bucerius Summer School on Global Governance

Beyond the Nation State – Governance in a Globalized World

From 4 August to 16 August 2003, the Ebelin and Gerd Bucerius ZEIT Foundation in Hamburg holds its third annual Bucerius Summer School on Global Governance.

Since 1971, the Ebelin and Gerd Bucerius ZEIT Foundation, among Germany's eight largest private foundations, has been involved in the funding of projects in various fields of science and research, education and training, as well as arts and culture. The Foundation was established by Gerd Bucerius, the late founder and publisher of Germany's leading quality weekly, DIE ZEIT. Roman Herzog, former German President, Helmut Schmidt, former German Chancellor, and Dr. Theo Sommer, Editor-at-Large of DIE ZEIT, serve on the Board of Trustees of the ZEIT Foundation. The Board's current chairman is Professor Manfred Lahnstein, former German Minister of Finance.

The Summer School is the ZEIT Foundation's largest current international project, harking back to Henry Kissinger's renowned International Summer School Seminar at Harvard University. Kissinger brought together emerging leaders from all over the world for a summer session of debates and lectures. Many of these participants went on to become heads of state or acquired internationally important positions.

This year's Bucerius Summer School is the third in a series that the ZEIT Foundation offers on an annual basis. Last year's Summer School was opened by former German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt with a speech on the theme „Governing the European Union: Challenges and Answers“ and by Lord Ralf Dahrendorf with a lecture on “Democracy in Europe”.

The focus of Summer School sessions is placed on “Global Governance”. The structure, nature and extent of present-day globalization makes it a qualitative and quantitative phenomenon that affects the world in an impressive process of dynamic change. At the same time there is a growing awareness that, far from being at the end, we are only at the beginning of these developments. The core theme of Global Governance is approached through a specific topic that is allocated to each day. Topics this year range from the European integration process to the role of the U.S. in world politics, from international terrorism to the North-South divide, from the international financial structure to the role of NGOs.

The overall aim of this project is to foster leadership qualities in young professionals by opening an international dialogue on current political, economic and juridical questions among executives that participate in the process of global governance; actors in the private, public and non-profit field. Participants are inspired by, as well as learn and receive input from speakers who are renowned public figures from the fields of international politics, business and academia. Keynote speakers in the 2003 Summer School will include Lord Ralf Dahrendorf, German State Secretary Dr. Klaus Scharioth, Dr. Peter Eigen, Chairman of the Board of Transparency International and Professor John Ruggie from the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University. All lectures and the lively debates that follow are held in English.

The Bucerius Summer School is a highly selective program. From over 250 applicants this year, we have invited 56 promising junior executives, politicians and scholars from 20 different countries – young women and men between 28 and 35 years of age who have already acquired some professional experience, but have not yet reached the peak of their careers – to attend this session. This year's Summer School promises to be particularly interesting, as debates are sure to touch upon powerful recent developments in the field of Global Governance: the aftermath of the Iraq conflict, the European Convent and the developments in the Middle East, just to mention a few examples.

To follow up on these annual meetings, the Bucerius Summer School runs an active internet network of Summer School alumni (www.bucerius-summer-school.de). The pages include an interactive skills database, a chat forum and a list of former and current participants and their CVs. The alumni themselves also arrange follow-up meetings and conferences to discuss current developments in the political, economic and social situation. The most recent example of such an event is a reunion that will take place in Munich this fall, organized by the Bucerius Summer School 2002 alumni. The fact that about 30 participants from the 2002 session will attend this event, including those who will fly in from the U.S. and Eastern Europe, demonstrates the success of the highly interactive approach and nature of the Bucerius Summer School.

Dr. Theo Sommer, Editor-at-Large of DIE ZEIT, chairs the sessions of the Summer School. Lectures and workshops are held at the Steigenberger Hotel in downtown Hamburg and at the German Foreign Office in Berlin. The Summer School also includes a one-day working session at the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea, which is located in Hamburg, and a day excursion to Potsdam. Dr. Theo Sommer, Dean of the Bucerius Summer School, and Dr. Bernhard Lorentz, Director of the Bucerius Summer School, are responsible for the two-week program.

We wish to express our gratitude to former Chancellor Helmut Schmidt for his advice and help in establishing the Bucerius Summer School.

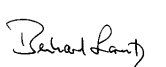

The ZEIT Foundation welcomes all speakers and participants. We wish them fruitful discussions, new insights and sustainable networking.
